Improving the Quality of Health Care for Mental and Substance-Use Conditions Institute of Medicine

2006-03-29 Each year, more than 33 million Americans receive health care for mental or substance-use conditions, or both. Together, mental and substance-use illnesses are the leading cause of death and disability for women, the highest for men ages 15-44, and the second highest for all men. Effective treatments exist, but services are frequently fragmented and, as with general health care, there are barriers that prevent many from receiving these treatments as designed or at all. The consequences of this are seriousâ€"for these individuals and their families; their employers and the workforce; for the nationâ€™s economy; as well as the education, welfare, and justice systems. Improving the Quality of Health Care for Mental and Substance-Use Conditions examines the distinctive characteristics of health care for mental and substance-use conditions, including payment, benefit coverage, and regulatory issues, as well as health care organization and delivery issues. This new volume in the Quality Chasm series puts forth an agenda for improving the quality of this care based on this analysis. Patients and their families, primary health care providers, specialty mental health and substance-use treatment providers, health care organizations, health plans, purchasers of group health care, and all involved in health care for mental and substance-use conditions will benefit from this guide to achieving better care.

Transition-Age Youth Mental Health Care

Vivien Chan 2021-03-10 Over the course of the last two decades, improved practices in child and adolescent mental healthcare have led to a decreased environment of stigma, which also led to an increased identification and treatment of mental health disorders in children and youth. Considering that treatment and outcomes are improved with early intervention, this is good news. However, the success gained in the field of child and adolescent psychiatry leads to a new challenge: transitioning from adolescent care to adult care. It has been known for some time that children, adult, and geriatric patients all have unique needs where it comes to mental healthcare, yet limited work has been done where it comes to the shifting of the lifespan. Where it comes to the child-adult transition—defined as those in their late teens and early/mid-20s—there can be multiple barriers in seeking mental healthcare that stem from age-appropriate developmental approaches as well as include systems of care needs. Apart from increasing childhood intervention, the problem is exacerbated by the changing social dynamics: more youths are attending college rather than diving straight into the workforce, but for various reasons these youths can be more dependent on their parents more than previous generations. Technology has improved the daily lives of many, but it has also created a new layer of complications in the mental health world. The quality and amount of access to care between those with a certain level of privilege and those who do not have this privilege is sharp, creating more complicating factors for people in this age range. Such societal change has unfolded so rapidly that training programs have not had an opportunity to catch up, which has created a crisis for care. Efforts to modernize the approach to this unique age group are still young, and so no resource exists for any clinicians at any phase in their career. This book aims to serve as the first concise guide to fill this gap in the literature. The book will be edited by two leading figures in transition age youth, both of whom are at institutions that have been at the forefront of this clinical work and research. This proposed mid-sized guide is therefore intended to be a collaborative effort, written primarily by child and adolescent psychiatrists, and also with adult psychiatrists. The aim is to discuss the developmental presentation of many common mental health diagnoses and topics in chapters, with each chapter containing clinically-relevant “bullet points” and/or salient features that receiving providers, who are generally, adult-trained, should keep in mind when continuing mental health treatment from the child and adolescent system. Chapters will cover a wide range of challenges that are unique to transition-age youths, including their unique developmental needs, anxiety, mood, and personality disorders at the interface of this development, trauma and adjustment disorders, special populations, and a wide range of other topics. Each chapter will begin with a clinical pearl about each topic before delving into the specifics.

Evaluation of the Department of Veterans Affairs Mental Health Services

National Academies of Sciences, Engineering, and Medicine 2018-03-29 Approximately 4 million U.S. service members took part in the wars in Afghanistan and Iraq. Shortly after troops started returning from their deployments, some active-duty service members and veterans began experiencing mental health problems. Given the stressors associated with war, it is not surprising that some service members developed such mental health conditions as posttraumatic stress disorder, depression, and substance use disorder. Subsequent epidemiologic studies conducted on military and veteran populations that served in the operations in Afghanistan and Iraq provided scientific evidence that those who fought were in fact being diagnosed with mental illnesses and experiencing mental health-related outcomes—in particular, suicide—at a higher rate than the general population. This report provides a comprehensive assessment of the quality, capacity, and access to mental health care services for veterans who served in the Armed Forces in Operation Enduring Freedom/Operation Iraqi Freedom/Operation New Dawn. It includes an analysis of not only the quality and capacity of mental health care services within the Department of Veterans Affairs, but also barriers faced by patients in utilizing those services.

Defense Health Care United States. General Accounting Office 1993 The Defense Department (DOD) has taken several steps to better manage mental health costs under the Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services (CHAMPUS) and improve the quality of care for beneficiaries. DOD has undertaken initiatives and demonstration projects that use management techniques similar to those used by private-sector companies and health plans that intensively manage mental health care. DOD has also instituted controls over payments to psychiatric facilities and improved standards for residential treatment centers. As a result, CHAMPUS mental health costs leveled off in fiscal years 1990 and 1991. Several problems persist, however, including poor medical record documentation, potentially inappropriate admissions, excessive hospital stays, and poor-quality care. Inspections of residential treatment facilities continue to reveal significant safety and health problems, and corrective actions often took many months. Moreover, DOD has proposed further changes to its methods of reimbursing psychiatric facilities. DOD should adopt these additional changes because it pays considerably higher rates for comparable services than do other public programs.

Defense Health Care U S Government Accountability Office (G 2013-06 GAO provided updated information on the Department of Defense's (DOD) efforts to improve the Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services' (CHAMPUS) management and quality of mental health care services. GAO found that: (1) recent DOD management initiatives, payment controls, and demonstration projects that employ utilization management techniques have reduced mental health care costs and improved the quality of care; (2) DOD medical records reviews have identified poor record documentation, potentially inappropriate admissions, excessive hospital stays, and poor-quality care; (3) residential treatment center inspections have identified unlicensed and unqualified staff, inappropriate use of patient seclusion and medication, inadequate staff-to-patient ratios, and inadequate treatment documentation; and (4) DOD has planned to change the CHAMPUS facility reimbursement methodology because it has paid psychiatric facilities more for comparable services than other federal programs.
